

Supporting Packaging Environmental's growth plans

Packaging Environmental is a forward-thinking business that promotes sustainability within packaging materials, a traditionally waste-generating sector.

THE CHALLENGE

As a growing company, Packaging Environmental needed more agility within its warehousing operations. Its previous provider was restricted by the amount of space it could offer and the systems in place for smooth and efficient operations.

The business realised it needed to source a new logistics partner who could assist with effective storage and good service, helping to fuel growth.

THE SOLUTION

Magnus Group offers substantial warehousing space in a key geographical location. With warehouses just outside Ipswich and at the Port of Felixstowe, our operations are central to a key transport hub with excellent links to all parts of the UK.

We also like to position ourselves as genuine partners with our customers. It means that we can help them to plan for the future, leveraging our company expertise to improve their logistics and, therefore, the service they can offer their end users. This was of fundamental importance to Packaging Environmental.

THE RESULT

Packaging Environmental has enjoyed significant year-on-year growth with more efficient logistics operations in place. This has dovetailed with ongoing service improvements and problem-solving for its supply chain issues.

The company now stores over 8,000 pallets with Magnus Group, and we pick over 30,000 cases every month, with a picking accuracy of around 99.5%.
